

KREative Writing Workshop

The self-organized student workshop coordinated by Katalin G. Kállay Associate Professor at the Institute of English Studies of Károli Gáspár University was started by a number of enthusiastic students in 2014, inspired by the course "Introduction to Literary Studies", who expressed their desire for a forum where they can present and discuss their creative works (both poetry and fiction) in English. We have had regular monthly meetings, and the student works were first published in a self-made style, in a booklet entitled So Much Depends Upon. In 2016, thanks to a NTP support, the book entitled This Is Just to Say was published by L'Harmattan Publishing House, which contains creative as well as academic works by 50 students, who participated in the illustration and the editing job of the volume as well. It is already a tradition that these students publicly present their works at the Christmas Party of the Institute of English Studies and they organize a public meeting at the Training Week. This year, the online workshop meeting was recorded on October 20, as a Training Week event, with 100 participants. The recording can be found at the following link:

The student organizers are Krisztina Milovszky (alumna), Beatrix Nagy and Péter Káplár (alumnus)

The workshop has its own website,

kreativeworkshop.hu

where individual works and information about the authors can be read, as well as the date of the workshop's next meeting.
