

Angol nyelv és kultúra tanára rövidciklusú tanárképzés záróvizsga tételei – 2 féléves (szaktanár)

1. How would you teach contrastive linguistic phenomena from the area of morphology (e.g. different tense systems, main verbs versus auxiliary verbs and modal verbs, countability) according to the principles of communicative and post-communicative language teaching?
2. Describe the role of dictionary use and teaching dictionary use in foreign language teaching. What processes of word formation would you teach? Describe the process of derivation with suffixes and prefixes, the construction of compound words, and the use of phrasal verbs, prepositional verbs, collocations and idioms.
3. Describe the methodology of teaching grammar structures based on the principles of communicative and post-communicative language teaching. How would you teach the Gerund and the Infinitive? Which types of dependent clauses contain these structures?
4. Types of complex sentences, co-ordination and subordination. What types of sentences do curricula include for different levels? Describe some contrastive analyses from the area of syntax. What is the stylistic role of these sentence types?
5. The methods of teaching vocabulary; learning strategies in learning new words. What does it mean to 'know' a word in a foreign language? Give a few examples of lexical (vocabulary) differences between British and American English. What English words do Hungarian learners have difficulties with (according to contrastive analyses)?
6. The importance of teaching pronunciation in the age of linguistic globalization: possibilities and challenges. Which English sounds do Hungarian learners have difficulties with? The levels of teaching pronunciation (sound formation, stress, intonation) and their role in developing communicative competence.
7. The levels of planning in English language teaching: long-term and short-term planning. The aims, aspects and elements of a lesson plan.
8. The principles of communicative and post-communicative language teaching. Communicative competence: its components and the conditions for its development in the classroom. What characterizes a communicative activity? The principles of error correction with regard to the different stages and aims of a lesson: accuracy versus fluency.
9. The role of testing and assessment in English language teaching. Types of tests and language exams. Formative and summative assessment, alternative assessment methods. Validity and reliability in testing knowledge.
10. Integrated skills development in the English lesson. What are the characteristics and stages of developing the four skills (receptive and productive)? Describe sub-skills and how they can be combined by drawing on practical examples from the English language classroom.
11. Learner-centred teaching, dealing with individual differences in the English lesson. Learning styles and strategies. The process, aims and tools of developing learner autonomy.

For the literature/history/culture topics, please bring a printed list of the literary works, social or cultural challenges, and traditions you have chosen to discuss. N.B.: you should choose different literary works for each literature topic.

12. British literature

Based on the course(s) you have taken during your training at KRE, discuss the main characteristics of a literary historical period of British literature (e.g. the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, modernism, etc.), and apply your insights to at least three works by three different authors.
